Can Information Communications Technologies be Pro-Poor?
Charles Kenny
ckenny@worldbank.org

Outline
- Access to Telephones Increases Incomes
- Telephone Increased Inequality
- Things Might Be Getting Better for the Telephone
- Not So for the Internet?

Teledensity and Growth

More Reason for Hope?
- Technology Advance
  - Mobile, WLL, etc.
- Policy Reform
  - Privatization, Competition, Regulation
- Public Access
  - Bangladesh, Senegal, India
- Reverse Subsidy
  - Chile

The Food Pyramid

USORO NR

- Foods from this group provide your body with the energy it needs. They are a better source of energy than other foods. Enjoy them, but eat them in moderation. Eat plenty of them.
- Fruits, vegetables, and grains provide vitamins and minerals. Choose items from this group often. Eat them every day to get their benefits. Eat plenty of them.
- Meats, beans, milk, and nuts provide protein. They are a great source of energy. Eat them often. Eat plenty of them.
- Oils and fats provide the energy that keeps you going. Eat them in moderation. Use them sparingly.
- Sugars provide energy and flavor. Eat them in moderation. Enjoy them for a treat.

The pyramid is divided into sections for easy reading. Each section is a group of foods that provide your body with the energy it needs. Enjoy them often. Eat plenty of them.